THBI NAMES DANIELLE LOBSINGER BUSH AS NEW DIRECTOR OF POLICY

AUSTIN, TX | September 26, 2022 – The Texas Healthcare and Bioscience Institute (THBI) is pleased to welcome Danielle Lobsinger Bush as the new Director of Policy. Lobsinger Bush, as Director of Policy, will play a key role in advocating on issues important to the life science and bioscience industry in Texas at both the state and federal level.

As the statewide voice of public policy for the healthcare and bioscience industry, THBI works to promote effective legislation and a steady regulatory environment for this industry in addition to supporting efforts that create a more favorable business environment and that supports the continued growth of this important and fast-growing economic sector.

Lobsinger Bush brings a unique set of experiences and talents which will help this organization, its members and our stakeholder partners engage effectively with state and federal elected officials, agency staff, and executives to accomplish key public policy goals and objectives. She will also help lead efforts to educate a broad range of stakeholders, partners, and the public about the challenges this industry and ultimately the patients who benefit from these industries innovations face today.

Lobsinger Bush comes to THBI from the Texas Health and Human Services Commission (HHSC), where she most recently served as Assistant Director of Policy. Her experience there includes four years as a Government Relations Specialist. Prior to HHSC she worked with the National Association of Insurance and Financial Advisors in Texas as Director of Governmental Affairs. She began her career working in the Texas House of Representatives as staff for a state representative.

“Her background, knowledge, and natural talent are the perfect trifecta for an organization like THBI,” said Victoria Ford, President and CEO of THBI. “She fundamentally understands not only how government and the legislative process work, but her prior experience means she understands how association advocacy works as well. We are excited to have Danielle join our team.”

Lobsinger Bush will begin as THBI’s Director of Policy on October 1, 2022.
